Swissair Tennis Final Sun.

By Bobby Tapson

The Swissair sponsored Open Tennis tournament enters its last heat tomorrow with two grand final matches in the women and men's singles at Hotel Africa Tennis Court in Virginia. The women's final which is the first match is expected to start at 3 p.m.

Renken and Guo will meet to decide who becomes Swissair Open female champion. Both players reached the final by winning two matches each.

The female group brought together five contestants and was played on a round robin basis. Others who took part are Lambert, Copel and Chan.

In the men singles, Samorah Kelfala and Winston Wreh are now set to sweat in the final count down. Winston Wreh reached the final by knocking out Chuch Johnson 6-3, 6-4 in the last semi-final match on Thursday.

The big question among tennis fans is who wins the grand first prize, the round trip ticket to Zurich? Kelfala struggled to enter the final after defeating Jimmy Nyumah 6-4, 2-6, 6-3 in the first semi final match on Wednesday, while Kessely 6-1, 5-7, 6-3 in the final.

Other prizes of the tournament include cash, trophies, and buffet for two at Hotel Africa, among others. The tournament, an annual event began on January 4 with several players from Buchanan, Bong Mines and Monrovia participating.
